Photography is suppose to be fun! Do you ever get stressed out or intimidated by your camera? Does the whole digital photography format make little sense to you? Do you ever wonder: “what are all these functions, buttons and icons for? How do they work?”

The National Eagle Center is proud to announce Digital Nature Photography by Mark J. Harlow. All of these questions and more will be answered during this one day seminar for beginner to intermediate photography enthusiasts. If you photograph mainly on “Auto Mode”, you will definitely want to take this tremendous class. Mark will describe and teach in an easy to understand manner. These are lessons you will be able to use for the rest of your life.

After to the 2-3 hour morning class, we will then break for lunch. We will then go with Mark to photograph one of our eagles, up close and personal. You will have him there to help you with your camera, settings and questions. Truly an experience you will find no where else. After the group is finished photographing, we will then return to the classroom to go over your experience, photos, critiquing and a short overview & summary of the days events including an additional question & answer segment. Be sure to bring your camera manual.

Learn first hand from one of the top nature photographers in the country, how to better understand your camera, how to improve your confidence and your picture taking abilities. Classes will be held Sunday, March 7th and Saturday, March 27, 2010 at the Wabasha VFW. Space is limited, please register early. Registration Fee: $85* member $95.00*non-member
